

Bradford's diverse community heritage celebrated and shared thanks to local knowledge

14/04/2023

School children take part in the Bradford Book Project
£100,000 National Lottery funding was shared across eight local projects, helping them delve into the upcoming City of Culture's fascinating heritage.

Pallay dey Khan at The Leap.

Cultural hub The Leap is imbedded in Bradford, helping local people explore the diverse heritage that matters to them.

We awarded them £100,000 to use their local knowledge to direct the funds towards eight small projects. The projects recently took to the stage in a final celebratory event called The Heritage Showcase. We went along to discover their stories.

Ensuring local people's voices are heard and their stories are shared can help to instil a greater sense of pride in communities.

Helen Featherstone, Director, England, North at The National Lottery Heritage Fund

Any Old Rag n' Bones co-project lead Robert Myers-Priestley.

Exploring heritage that is meaningful for communities

From Punjabi proverbs to scones and samosas, the community-led projects explored and shared the stories important to them.

Any Old Rag 'n' Bones

The project used an exhibition and dance show to explore the stories of scrap metal collecting in Bradford. It included the tale of a young traveller girl from a 'rag-and-bone' family who makes musical instruments from materials she finds. Devised by young people, it will soon visit Bradford's libraries and community centres.

Bussing Out artwork.

Bussing Out

South Asian-heritage families who home school their children researched the history of 'bussing out', a controversial education policy of the 1960s and 1970s. The families recorded oral histories and created artworks, including a powerful audio-visual installation inside a replica school bus, that will go on tour across Bradford.

Pitch and Pair: Freedom Series

During art workshops organised by a women-led collective, local people interpreted what freedom meant to them. The project was part of the Bradford South Asian Heritage Festival, which marked 75 years since the partition of India and the creation of Pakistan.

Pitch and Pair talk.

It's been an eye opener engaging people within the community and witnessing how excited they are to realise that their voices and stories are important.

Rahila Hussain, Bradford South Asian Heritage Festival

'Special' Histories of Bradford.

Rahila Hussain, of Bradford South Asian Heritage Festival, said: "It's been an eye opener engaging people within the community, and witnessing how excited they are to realise that their voices and stories are important".

'Special' Histories of Bradford

Participants worked with an archivist, writer, dancer and artist to create an exhibition of historic and modern accounts of life with a learning disability in Bradford.

Bradford Book Project

Pupils from Bowling Park Primary School worked with a local author, illustrator and historian to create an immersive picture book telling the story of Bradford.

Commonwealth Contribution Memories.

Commonwealth Contribution Memories

Community archivists collated stories and memorabilia from veterans and their families with heritage in the Commonwealth, turning them into an exhibition and learning materials.

Palay dey Khan – Minority Proverbs in a New Land

Proverbs used by people in Bradford's multilingual communities were explored through interviews which formed a touring exhibition.

Scones and Samosas

People from various backgrounds came together for weekly cooking sessions to explore heritage food memories. They created a recipe book.

Hearing local people's voices

Helen Featherstone at The Heritage Showcase Q&A.

Helen Featherstone, Director, England, North at The National Lottery Heritage Fund, said:
“Everybody has heritage, it is the fabric of who we are.

“Ensuring local people’s voices are heard and their stories are shared can help to instil a greater sense of pride in communities, and these eight amazing projects are perfect examples of why Bradford is truly a city to be proud of.”

Have a project idea?

If there’s heritage in your local area that you’d like to share, we can help. Explore our funding programmes to find out how we can support your heritage.

You might also be interested in...

A family at the Land of Iron.

North

A Life's a Drag performance

Life's a drag: LGBTQ+ heritage in Manchester

Liverpool fans attending the 1978 Bruges European Cup Final. Credit: Adrien Killen

Liverpool Football Club's RED archive caravan tour